Adero Willard

I am grateful for the opportunity to review the many images of pots submitted by our community. However, selecting only a certain number for the exhibition was challenging. I considered image quality, including different views, focus, lighting, and minimal background distraction. Functionality is also an important factor. From there, I combined my experience and passion for pottery to choose pieces that spoke to me personally, including texture, color, volume, and form.

I have been working with clay for more than 25 years, and I still find it to be a beautiful and transformative material. My experience in creating, teaching, and using pottery influenced my selection process, but I also look for potential and skill in the pieces I choose. Developing confidence, patience, and ingenuity takes time, making skill crucial, but I'm also excited by the potential of new potters.

Each pot we create or encounter holds a certain intimacy as we interact with it—touching, lifting, turning it over, and imagining its place in our daily lives. Using pottery crafted by different artists in various activities adds depth and texture to our existence, engaging our senses with its unique characteristics.

Reviewing the submitted images, I found joy in discovering connections to history in the contemporary approaches of skilled artists working with porcelain, stoneware, and red earthenware. The transformative power of clay was evident in the diverse textures and surfaces of the pots.

For this exhibition, I chose pieces where surface and form harmonize in unique ways, whether seamless or funky. I particularly admired pots uniquely designed for flowers, those with smooth, creamy faceted volumes, rough-hewn textures, silky earthy ash flows, colorful patterned underglaze surfaces, and the gleaming gem-like depths of glaze. I love a beautiful considered negative space of a handle or the space between spout and handle.

Curating this exhibition was a pleasure as I aimed to showcase these artists' incredible diversity, creativity, and skill and celebrate our shared passion for working with clay. I look forward to seeing these beautiful pieces in person and offering my congratulations to all who were accepted. To those who submitted but were not accepted, thank you for your time and patience during this jurying process. While I was unable to include everyone, I encourage you to apply again next year.

Your friend in clay,
Adero Willard

We are excited to have Adero Willard jury the thirty-first annual SFPN. She selected 130 pieces from 127 artists for this year's exhibition. We believe this is another wonderful show with something for everyone to enjoy and appreciate.

Amy Burk

Kevin Lehman

Adero Willard has been a studio potter for over twenty-five years. She currently is an assistant visiting professor at New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University. She received a BFA at Alfred University in 1995 and MFA at Nova Scotia College of Art and Design in 2006. In 2008 she completed a one-year Salad Days residency at Watershed Center for Ceramic Arts in Maine. Currently at Alfred, Willard works as faculty co-facilitator for IDEA lab, a program for cultivating diverse and inclusive co-learning environments as part of an anti-racism and anti-bias program. Adero co-founded POW! Pots on Wheels in 2014 and works on the board to support and develop outreach programming. POW!'s mission continuously finds ways of sharing ceramics in communities, from rural classrooms to inner city neighborhoods. Adero curated an exhibit of 19 established and emerging Black women and Black non binary ceramic artists at NCECA in 2023 called Clay Holds Water, Water Holds Memory. Adero has been on a number of ceramics discussion panels, exhibited work nationally and internationally and has been featured in a number of publications and books on ceramics.

We thank all the many volunteers and organizations that help with making this show a reality, and we thank all the applicants who have been faithfully applying for years and the new potters who took the chance this year to apply. And, as always, thank you to the patrons that keep coming in to view and support this wonderful exhibition.

Enjoy the show!
